Introduction

“One of the most beautiful places in Vermont, and thus one of the most beautiful places in New England, Addison county [is] a place of big sky and wide horizons. The flatness of the landscape, edged on all sides by the roll of the distant mountains, is unusual in New England. Beyond that, Addison county has the richest farmland in Vermont, bar none.” ~Edie Clark, Yankee Magazine

Nestled in the gently rolling countryside of farms and woodlands with the Green Mountains to the east and the Adirondacks to the west, Addison County is rich in lake, pastoral and mountain beauty. History comes alive and each community offers glimpses of its past along with an array of social and cultural opportunities—from concerts, museums and community plays to pancake breakfasts and strawberry festivals. In springtime wildflowers grow in profusion, making our roadsides, meadows and woodlands a welcoming garden. Nearby mountains, forests and lakes invite you to pack a picnic, enjoy swimming holes, hike the trails or camp under a sea of stars.

Our towns and villages offer inviting parks and greens, restaurants and friendly businesses. Golf, tennis, hiking and biking are some of our favorite pastimes in the summer; in winter, snowy mountains and fields are perfect for Alpine and Nordic skiing as well as snowshoeing. The golds and reds of autumn make our fall foliage season one of the most spectacular in the world.

Climate

The weather is always changing and sometimes difficult to predict. Vermont's climate is classified as Continental Moist. This means that our summers are usually mild and our winters are cold. Precipitation is moderate in all seasons. Vermont has four distinct seasons.

The amount of snow Vermont receives varies from winter to winter and from one region of the state to another. The lower elevations near Lake Champlain receive about 60 inches of snow each year. Up to 120 inches of snow may fall each year in the southern Green Mountains. The average temperature for the winter season is 22 degrees F. The cold weather is broken up by thaws when temperatures reach 40 or 50 degrees F. and the snow melts.

Toward the end of March, signs of spring appear, such as patches of bare ground and precipitation in the form of rain instead of snow. Melting snow and rain can cause rivers and streams to overflow. Vermont often experiences floods at this time of the year as well as "mud season".

Summer is a pleasant season in Vermont with very few days reaching above 90 degrees F. This is also the season of quickly moving thunderstorms that can bring damaging hail, wind, and rain. The vast majority of summer days have temperatures in the 70's and 80's.

Fall in Vermont is considered by many people to be the most beautiful season. This is the time of the year when the leaves change color. The hills and valleys become a red and gold wonderland. Most Vermonters have heard about Indian summer. It is a warming trend of dry, moderate weather conditions that lasts for several days. The timing of Indian summer varies from year to year; however, to be a true Indian summer it must occur after the first frost.

Education

Vermont is known nationwide for its accomplishments in setting and assessing high academic standards for its public schools. Beyond secondary education, Addison County is home to Middlebury College, considered one of the most outstanding small, private liberal arts colleges in the country.

For the adult learner, there are numerous opportunities and resources available through cooperative efforts established by education and business.

Elementary and Secondary Education

There are five school districts that serve the communities of Addison County. Many towns in Addison County offer preschools and all have elementary education programs. For secondary education students go on to consolidated school districts which serve neighboring communities. The Patricia A. Hannaford Career Center offers an integrated work and learning program to students in three of these supervisory unions. In addition to these public schools, there are private schools for students at all grade levels.

See the addendum with this document for contact information for all area schools.

Town of Middlebury – Shire Town of Addison County

Middlebury, the shire town of Addison County, was chartered in 1761 and was settled just after the Revolutionary War. Today, the village is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is home to many shops, businesses and architecturally distinguished churches and public buildings. It is the largest community in the county with a population of approximately 8,500.

It is comprised of 39 square miles located in the west central part of Vermont. As the shire town, Middlebury is home to many of the state services in the county, such as the Superior, Family and District Courts, UVM Health Network - Porter Medical Center, Department for Children and Families, employment and Economic Services offices. It is also the center for education, business and industry in this part of the state. The town has a village center where most services, retail, housing and industry are located. The remainder of the community is made up of scattered housing developments, agricultural land and the village of East Middlebury.

Emergency Services:

- Police: 13 full-time officers; 2 part-time officers
- Fire: 34 firefighters
- Ambulance: 40+ staff members (Middlebury Regional EMS provides 24-hour emergency and non-emergency patient transport, heavy rescue, and other EMS related services to most of Addison County and beyond.)

Government

County/Municipal:

At the County level, Vermont only has courts. It does not have county government.

There are 22 towns and one city in Addison County, each with its own municipal government. The three largest communities are the towns of Bristol, Middlebury and the City of Vergennes. For information on tax information, zoning, building permits, and licenses, contact the individual town offices. A complete listing of contact information and office hours for each town clerk is available here: <https://www.addisoncounty.com/town-clerks>. Town clerks are responsible for the record keeping of deeds, land records, notes and liens, mortgages, property transfers, voter registration, vital statistics and licenses.

Vermont town meeting, essentially the town legislature, is a tradition dating back to before there was a Vermont. The first town meeting was held in Bennington in 1762, 15 years before Vermont was created. On Town Meeting Day, the first Tuesday in March, citizens across Vermont come together in their communities to discuss the business of their towns, elect local officials and vote on budgets. For more than 200 years Town Meeting Day, also a state holiday, has been an important political event as well as a time for neighbors to discuss the civic issues of their community, state, and nation.

State and Federal:

Addison County is represented in the state legislature by nine representatives and two senators. Vermont sends two senators and one representative to the U.S. Congress. A complete listing of state and federal representatives is available here:

Tax Structure (Department of Taxes: Local Option Tax, 2018; Participating Municipalities, 2018)

- Vermont sales tax: 6% (Middlebury only 6% + 1% local option tax)
- Room & meals tax: 9% (Middlebury only 9% + 1% local option tax)
- Alcohol: 10% (Middlebury only 10% + 1% local option tax)
- Income tax: Rates are assessed over several tax brackets: View 2022 tax rates here.

Property Tax

Property is assessed at the municipal local level to pay for municipal services and at the State level to pay for public education property owners receive one property tax bill from their municipality and remit the taxes to their municipality. The municipality then remits the Education Property Tax portion to the State.

The legislative body of the municipality (selectboard or alderboard) sets a tax rate or rates to raise money for highways and other necessary municipal expenses. There are also provisions for levying of taxes in villages and fire districts.

For the purpose of education funding, all real property is classified as either homestead or non-residential. A statewide education tax is imposed on these two classes of property at different rates. The homestead education tax rate in each municipality depends upon the local per pupil spending. Both the homestead and non-residential education tax rates are adjusted by the local common level of appraisal.

Contact your town clerk's office for current tax rates. A list of all town clerks can be found here: <https://www.addisoncounty.com/town-clerks>

Economics

Addison County is largely rural, but is the home to the towns of Middlebury, the county’s shire town; Bristol, a gateway to the Green Mountains; and Vergennes, Vermont’s oldest and smallest city. Middlebury is the primary population and job center within the county, which is home to more than a quarter of the county’s population.

Addison County is an agricultural leader in Vermont. It has the most farm acreage in the state and continues to lead the state in the value of agricultural products sold. This is mainly through dairy operations, but also by well-established apple orchards and other specialty food producers in the county. The area is also noted for contributing to the state’s total hardwood production.

The Champlain Valley has long been noted for its dairy farms and agricultural harvests—hence its reputation as the “land of milk and honey.” Today, milk production and fruit products remain a mainstay of the economy. The many acres of forests are a source of raw materials for sawmills and wood product companies.

Addison County is home to a division of Collins Aerospace and numerous light manufacturing and value-add agricultural facilities. The diverse economy produces wooden toys, paper products, adult beverages, cheese products, construction materials, furniture, and other goods. Addison County is also home to magazine and book publishers, artists, advertising agencies, architects, illustrators, designers, writers and other professionals. This mix of people is served by a variety of small retail and service businesses.

Recreation

Enjoy all-season recreational opportunities. The Green Mountain National Forest includes more than 500 miles of trails extending two-thirds the length of Vermont. These trails offer endless opportunities to explore the outdoors in any season. The Vermont State Parks and the U.S. Forest Service expand the recreational opportunities by providing camping, boating, hiking, fishing, hunting, birding and recreational areas. www.fs.usda.gov/gmfl

Nestled in the Green Mountain National Forest is the Moosalamoo Region—16,000 acres of public and private land devoted to providing public access for outdoor recreational opportunities. There are over 70 miles of well-maintained trails for hiking, skiing, snowshoeing, as well as biking, horseback riding, and snowmobiling. Hiking in the Moosalamoo Region offers everything from wilderness solitude to views of waterfalls, lakes, mountains, and scenic vistas. www.moosalamoo.org

The Middlebury Area Land Trust “Trail Around Middlebury” (TAM) has conserved acres of farm and woodlands to create accessible biking, running, walking and hiking trails. The clear lakes and rivers in Addison County invite swimming, canoeing, kayaking, sailing and boating adventures. These special places give you a chance to get away from it all. www.maltvt.org

Vermonters exemplify the motto “work hard, play hard.” The accessibility of recreational opportunities makes many Vermonters fitness and outdoor enthusiasts. When snow covers the land, skiers of all abilities will find groomed cross-country trails at the Rikert Nordic Center located on the Middlebury College Bread Loaf Campus and the Ralph Myhre Golf Course adjacent to the College’s main campus. The Middlebury College Snow Bowl offers challenging alpine skiing and snowboarding. Snowy mountains and fields are also perfect for snowshoeing and snowmobiling. Logging and hiking routes abound for those who like to blaze their own trails.

There are many golf courses in the area as well as tennis, swimming, skating, hockey, horseback riding, and indoor workout facilities. Organized sports, outings and races abound and our sporting goods stores and tack shops are prepared to outfit sports enthusiasts of any age, interest and ability.

Lodging/Hospitality

Whether you're visiting Addison County for a long weekend, extended vacation or Middlebury College function such as graduation or parents' weekend, the region is home to a variety of lodging properties to fit any style and budget. You could stay at a resort on the shores of Lake Champlain, an in-town bed and breakfast in Middlebury or rent a cabin in the woods—there are many choices.

There are approximately 700 beds available in Addison County, as well as several campgrounds and rental homes.

Many restaurants, civic groups, and halls have conference/meeting facilities with seating from 10 to 200 people. <https://www.addisoncounty.com/meetings>

Addison County has many fine restaurants featuring all types of cuisine, a number of capable caterers and equipment rentals.

Arts and Entertainment

Addison County is alive in the arts. From the fine handcrafted artwork created by many local artisans to bluegrass bands playing at the Annual Festival on the Green, visual and performing artists thrive in the scenic and creative atmosphere of our area.

Through its concert, arts and lecture series, Middlebury College offers outstanding performers, speakers, and exhibits available to the community and most events are free. Concert series and performances are held in the spectacular 370-seat recital hall of the Middlebury College Center for the Arts. You can take in nationally known folk, blues, Celtic and acoustic performers at the After Dark Music Series, bring a picnic dinner to an evening concert at the Festival on the Green, or watch a spectacular display of fireworks at the Annual Vermont Symphony Orchestra's Pops Concert in July. Residents and visitors are always welcome to listen to the Bristol Band play at the Village Green bandstand or the Vergennes City Band play at the City Park bandstand.

Ongoing performances can be found at the historical Vergennes Opera House, the Ripton Coffee House or Middlebury's Town Hall Theater. The Vermont Folklife Center offers a gallery of folk and traditional arts as well as crafts and one-of-a-kind gifts. The Middlebury College Kevin P. Mahaney '84 Center for the Arts offers year-round art exhibitions, programs and special events. For the ultimate taste of the arts, the state hosts an Open Studio Weekend where members of Vermont's artisan community open their doors to the public for demonstrations and sale of their work. Many organizations and individuals also offer art classes for adults and children.
